

Stronger Communities Through Stories

What is your business' story?
How does your story connect to the rest of our community?
How can you make a better connection and grow your business?

November 3, 2017
Chincoteague Cultural Alliance Community Center for the Arts
6309 Church Street
1pm - 2pm

FREE seminar/workshop being held in adjunct to the Chincoteague Storytelling Festival
Light refreshments will be provided or bring a bag lunch

RSVP by October 31 to cndy_fth@yahoo.com or 757-894-1953

Join Donald Davis, the "Dean of Storytelling" and experience ways in which our stories are the fabric of our communities and how knowing one another's stories can become the bridge builder for stronger community pride and understanding.

Donald Davis is an American storyteller, author & minister. Davis had a twenty-year career as a minister before he became a professional storyteller. He has recorded over 25 storytelling albums & written several books based on those stories. His long career as a teller & his promotion of the cultural importance of storytelling through seminars and master classes has led to Davis being dubbed the "Dean of Storytelling".

Davis is a strong advocate of storytelling; not just the profession, but also storytelling in everyday life. He feels that we connect with one another through the stories that we tell each other across the family dinner table or at a bar after work. He believes that stories are really about identity, about who we are, & that technology may be all about moving information but it is in our stories that wisdom is passed down.

